A WELL-MANAGED SAVINGS BANK

The Woodstock Spirit of the Age, in an editorial on the Hyde Park Savings Bank, makes the following very complimentary remarks in regard to the management of that institution:

Eighteen years ago the Lamotte County Savings Bank and Trust Co. of Hyde Park, boomed by ex-Gov. Carroll S. Page, and of which he is president, was organized. It has grown and prospered in the full light of publicity, but something besides printer's ink has made it a success. Since its beginning it has never loaned a dollar outside of Vermont, and it has a record of never having lost a dollar by a poor investment. Publicity can do much, but nothing but good management can keep any institution on its feet for any length of time, a fact that seems to be well demonstrated in the case of the Hyde Park institution.

The success of this bank is very well known to Vermonters. They learn that its assets passed the million-dollar mark July 11th, and are not likely to forget that ex-Gov. Page is prominently connected with it. And why shouldn't he make a fuss over it? He was the first to establish a bank for the handling of Vermont business exclusively, and having made it one of the strongest and safest institutions in the state, he is in a position where much modesty would be most unbecoming.

TO CHECK BOMB THROWERS

Civil Rights Suspended in Barcelona

FIVE INFERNAL MACHINES

Exploded by Anarchists—Bell Telephone Rights Bought by Manitoba—King of Denmark Very Anxious to Visit Roosevelt.

Barcelona, Jan. 3.—In consequence of the renewal of the campaign of bomb outrages by local anarchists, King Alfonso has signed a decree provisionally suspending a portion of the constitutional guarantee in this city. In the last few days five infernal machines deposited in various parts of the city exploded without causing material damage. On Wednesday night, however, a policeman found a large one on the doorstep of a mansion. In carrying away the machine it exploded, frightfully mutilating the officer, injuring several bystanders and partially wrecking surrounding buildings. The policeman died that night of the injuries he sustained.

MANITOBA BUYS TELEPHONES.
Rights of the Bell Company Purchased for $3,300,000.

Toronto, Can., Jan. 3.—A special from Winnipeg says:

Greetings for the new year to the people of Manitoba from the provincial government were conveyed in the announcement that the Bell telephone system had been purchased in its entirety. The price paid, according to the announcement of Premier Roblin, was $3,300,000, and besides this the province has also purchased a given of the equipment to the extent of $100,000 more. Payment will be made in forty-year four per cent. bonds payable at par, which at the present market price of the province's bonds makes the price paid in round figures about $3,000,000. The government will assume control Jan. 15, and Mr. Roblin announced last night that the system will be operated by a commission. The present officials of the company will likely be retained, as they are very competent.

WANTS TO VISIT ROOSEVELT.

Danish King Has a Long Conversation With American Minister.

Crown Prince Christian displayed a great interest in the voyage of the American battleship fleet from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

EMPIRE STATE SIDE-WIPED.

Water Spout Rakes Central Flier and Smashes All The Windows.

Albany, Jan. 3.—The Empire State Express train north bound on the New York Central and Hudson River railroad and due in Albany at 11 p. m., yesterday, had a narrow escape from serious accident between Rhinecliff and Hudson. The spout of a water tower "side-wiped" the locomotive and broke all the windows along the side of the train. The train did not leave the track, and while the passengers were severely shaken up and thrown into a mad panic no one was injured. The train arrived here about an hour late.

The train was making fast time, and before the engineer could check speed the heavy spout had raked the entire side. Not a window in the cars escaped. All of them were crowded to capacity and in a moment the passengers were thrown into the wildest state of excitement. They were peppered right and left by broken glass.

Quick action on the part of the trainmen alone prevented the panic-stricken passengers from bolting through the doors and jumping. The crew stood by the doors and halted the rush in the nick of time.

The heavy train sped on for a quarter of a mile before the engineer could bring it to a standstill, and in the meantime the excited passengers were certain that any instant the cars were in peril of being ditched.

SCIENCE SIFTINGS.

Out of the multitude of "stars" visible to the naked eye only some dozen or so are "planets"—that is, satellites of the sun.

Beyond a doubt the earth is similar to the other planets in reflecting the light of the sun. If there are intelligent beings on Mars, Venus and Jupiter, if Jupiter is not too far away, the earth looks to them just as their planet does to us.

If a human nerve fiber was stretched out round the earth containing two brains very close together it would be 122 hours before a headache in one would be felt in the other. An electric impulse circles the earth in a little more than one second.

Sounded Ominous.

"Your father said something about my staying so late last night, didn't he?" asked the young man.

"Yes," replied the dowd girl, "he did say something, but I don't know just what he meant. He said if you didn't go home earlier hereafter there'd be a tick coming from him."—Philadelphia Press.

A CASTILIAN BRAVADO

Revolting Scene Pictured by a Spanish Novelist.

NERVE OF THE HAUGHTY DON

Striking Description of the Daring and Courage Displayed by the Old General Who Would Not Permit an Englishman to Outdo Him.

The realistic Spanish novelist, Valdes, in one of his most popular stories ("Sister San Sulpice," translated by Nathan Haskell Dole) gives a description of a retired Spanish general's afternoon out which will illustrate many chivalric incidents in Spanish life and aptly illustrates the reckless daring and courage of which the average haughty don is liberally possessed. The scene is a sort of picnic grounds in the outskirts of Seville. "Meanwhile the animation had been on the increase among the ruffians. The period of unmannerly action had come. One of them climbed upon a table to make a speech, and then the others, by way of applause, threw sherry and manzanilla in his face. Another was trying to lift with his teeth a companion whom drunkenness had stretched out on the floor. He did not succeed. He merely tore his sack coat. Still others were committing absurd and extravagant actions, making a great noise and uproar.

"The count remained grave and silent, drinking one glass of sherry after another. But his eyes were no longer, as usual, incomprehensible and unfathomable, like those of a man tired of life. Though he did not speak or move about he seemed a different man.

"The Englishman had taken off his jacket and waistcoat, and rolling up his shirt sleeves, was exhibiting his biceps, which were really powerful, and trying to break empty bottles on his arm. Once blood had come, but he went on breaking the bottles without paying any attention to it. Then he asked the waiter to bring a bottle of rum and a large glass. He filled this to the brim with the liquor, and then slowly, without moving a muscle or even winking, he drained it to the bottom. Then he sat down at the table opposite the count and said solemnly: "You can't do that."

"A flash of fury gleamed through the haughty nobleman's eyes, but he succeeded in restraining himself, and, turning the rest of the bottle into the glass, he calmly ordered the waiter to bring him some pepper. He threw in a pinch of it, then threw into his cigar ashes heaped up before him and, without saying a word, with the same scornful, contemptuous smile, drained the glass, and not content with that, bit it in pieces. We saw his lips spotted with blood. The company received with oles and shouts of triumph this proof of an unconquerable stomach, in which it seemed as though the national honor were concerned.

"Our neighbors in the other booths must have reached the same happy grade of temperature, for nothing was heard but extravagant shouts, the crashing of glasses, coarse laughter and swearing.

"The count was not yet satisfied with his victory over the Englishman. While he was swallowing with apparent calmness the glasses of liquor which were offered to him he did not cease to devour him with his eyes, carried away by a dull madness, which soon broke out. His eyes, which were the only part of his impassive face that moved, gleamed more and more ferociously, like those of a madman when a straitjacket has been put on him. The Englishman continued to boast of his strength. He was now thoroughly intoxicated and talking incoherently enough to the others, who were not so drunk.

"So you are very valiant, are you?" asked the count, still smiling disdainfully.

"More than you," retorted the Englishman.

"Don Jenaro started to spring at him, but the others restrained him. Soon calming himself, he said:

"If you are so brave, why not put your hand on the table?"

"What for?"

"To pin it down with mine."

"The Englishman without an instant's hesitation stretched out his huge, brawny hand. The count took out of his pocket a damascened dagger and laid his delicate, gentlemanly hand on the Englishman's, and with out hesitation and with ferocious grip he raised the point with the other and drove it through both into the table.

"The women uttered a cry of terror. All of us men ran to their assistance. A few left the place in search of help. In an instant our booth was filled with blood. From the wounds great drops of blood streamed, staining the handkerchiefs which we applied to them.

"A doctor who happened to be among the bystanders dressed the wounds provisionally with the few means at his disposal. The count smiled while they were dressing his hand. The Englishman was as sick as a horse, and soon the count was the same, and both were taken to such rooms as the establishment had to offer and went to bed. Every one left, commenting on the barbarism of the deed."
